

The Daily W

The Plagu3 Strikes Again

Downtown Seattle ended up violently shook as a warehouse belonging to Shady Stuffs Exports was demolished unexpectedly. The Plagu3, claiming responsibility, stated that they begged for their demise by breaking trade embargoes. Fortunately, no-one was injured in the blast.

Res
foll
imp
The
that rola

Fence Road

Plagu3: The Hacktivist Hero

Some would call The Plagu3 a villain, some would call them a hero. Whilst I do condemn their actions, it is impossible to ignore the positive influence they have achieved by scaring the rich into caring about the poor. Last night, the headquarters of Freaking Frackers Pty Ltd was destroyed. The company had multiple pending class action lawsuits from citizens claiming that their fracking practices had made their tap water toxic. Whilst the Plagu3's true intentions in this case is currently unknown, Police acknowledge that a USB stick with the Plagu3's signature logo engraved on it was left at the scene.

Res
foll
imp
The
that rela
the beh
of a exp in l its

The Defender

Kidding, but not Joking

"We use Child Slave Labor" tweeted Stephanie Stew-Blemey, the CEO of Blues Shoes. Online Twitter users were initially confused by the odd message, until the Police confirmed a few days later that they received an anonymous tip from a concerned citizen of an alarming note.

Investigators have revealed that they received a package with a hard-drive with a lime-green rat logo engraved on it containing security camera footage showing children building shoes in a filthy warehouse. Stephanie can clearly be seen hurling abuse at the children; "Build fing faster you useless pieces of sh."

We attempted to contact a representative at Blues Shoes, but as of writing, haven't received a response.

Re
foll
imp

The
that
rela
the
beh
of a
exp
in l
its beh
con
or v

